GEAR + VIDEO GAMES

EDITED BY JEFF KITTS

NASCAR (PSP)

NASCAR racing has finally made its way to the PSP, and this game does an excellent job of bringing all the intense, door-banging action of the long-running console series to the handheld wonder.

The fully licensed title features real racers like Jeff Gordon and Matt Kenseth, real tracks like Talladega and Bristol (as well as a few fantasy ones), and such series as Craftsman Truck, Whelen Modified, and Nextel Cup. NASCAR even lets you engage in various real-world scenarios from the 2005 season. $39.95 / ea.com

SIRIUS STILETTO LIVE SL100PK1

Fans of satellite radio were ecstatic when Sirius announced its $50 portable radio player back in August of '05—until they realized they couldn't listen to live broadcasts while on the move. Sirius took its lumps for this technological misstep but has redeemed itself in spades with its new Stiletto portable device. Not only does this wicked-looking handheld receive live Sirius broadcasts over its antenna headphone or an accessible WiFi network; it can also store up to 100 hours of content (as well as your own digital audio files) on its 2GB hard drive. $399.99 / sirius.com

OPPO DIGITAL DV-970HD

As AV manufacturers go, OPPO lacks the name recognition of many of its competitors—but the new DV-970HD upconverting DVD player could very well change that. Ideal for use with a flat-panel HDTV, the DV-970HD upconverts standard DVDs to HD quality. The unit offers an HDMI output, has a 4-in-1 flash memory-card reader for viewing digital pictures on the TV, and is compatible with audio and video formats including SACD, DVD-Audio, DivX, and XviD. $149 / oppodigital.com

LOGITECH Z-10 INTERACTIVE SPEAKER SYSTEM

With the 30-watt Z-10 system, Logitech breaks new ground in the desktop-audio department. It has a series of touch-sensitive controls, allowing listeners to manage their music without having to switch applications (or even needing the monitor on). Users can also toggle between tracks or even call up Internet radio stations. The LCD readout displays artist and song-title information and has a time/date function. $149.99 / logitech.com

ENDOR AG [FANATEC.HEADSHOT]

For PC gamers, precision aiming means the difference between life and death on the battlefield. And, clearly, the German company Endor AG had the 133t player in mind when it designed its new [FANATEC.head$h0t] gaming mouse. The controller can be tailored to hands of all shapes and offers on-the-fly sensitivity adjustment. The package comes in a LAN suitcase with the aURa mousepad (with illuminated cable holder), emul8or software for making macros, and a USB 2.0 hub. $99.99 / fanatec.com

AUDIOSKIN CABLE ORGANIZER

We love our gear, but the wiring can be an unsightly mess. Now, with the new AudioSkin, you can collect loose cables and "zipper" them into one snake with a twist of the wrist. Individual cables can be pulled out to any length for easy connectivity. $16.99 / audioskin.net
